DESCRIPTION

In this elective course, we will read about literacy education with a focus on social justice. We will explore literacy practices from the perspective of place-based pedagogies to address the needs of learners in different educational contexts (basic, media and tertiary education). Inspired in the Freireian concept of conscientizacão (1970/1995) this seminar regards the notion of place, as the context that allows perceiving social, political, and economic realities, with the aim of becoming immersed in a situated reflection on the necessary actions to transform the oppressive elements identified in those practices. Therefore, exploring the local literacy practices of the school and its neighborhood as places we occupy every day is a key exercise for teachers in this seminar. In doing so, we will consider the urban social, cultural, linguistic and literacy practices that surround schools and will study the means of expression present among individuals and collectives that share urban languages and literacy practices.

SEMINAR GOALS

1. Become acquainted with perspectives of literacy that relate to sociocultural aspects of learning, critical literacies and place-based education.
2. Explore different views of literacy as a field of A.L. to understand new possibilities that exist.
3. Establish connections between theory, research and pedagogical experiences presented in professional readings and their own teaching through in class discussions and pedagogical projects.
4. Understand critical literacy from research carried globally and locally that look at texts and discourses to question colonization and assimilation processes within language teaching.
5. Explore and analyze literacies and discourses in social contexts to understand the phenomenon of crossing socio-economic frontiers in the interurban spaces of the city.
6. Understand the need to deschool literacy and to be able to propose transformative practices within a view of literacies in society.

TOPICS

1. What is Literacy? Why is literacy development important in society globally?
2. Sociocultural models of literacy

3. The failure of reading theories (Dressman, 2005)
4. Literacy theories for the digital age (K. Mills, 2016)
5. Critical Literacies and social justice
6. Beliefs about Social Justice in English Education
 - a. Community Literacies
 - b. Urban literacies
 - c. Place-based pedagogies
7. Rethinking the role of English literacy in Colombia and Latin-America

METHODOLOGY

The course will be conducted as a seminar that includes reading literature, participating in the discussion of topics, oral presentations, interactions with guest speakers, and global videoconferences. There will be general readings for all the students and a set of books and articles for you to select specific titles to read in a group that match your research interest.

ASSESSMENT AND EVALUATION

Activity	Description	Percentage
Class presentation	Oral presentation to class about a selected reading from proposed reading list. Oral presentation of outcomes of field assignments.	20%
Curricular Unit Due April	Each student will plan an 4 to 8-week curricular unit to implement literacy activities with his/her students. PPT presentations Each student will do an oral presentation of the curricular unit and theoretical support of pedagogical intervention. Please prepare a 5-slide ppt that include graphic representation of the concepts and theoretical perspective used to support your pedagogical implementation. Present the chart with the curricular unit and explain the processes and activities that promote students' literacies. Make sure that you illustrate graphically the connections between the pedagogical and the theoretical aspects. Students will have 10 minutes for the presentation. It is highly recommended to monitor possible deficit discourses.	20%
Poster sessions Due May	In groups students choose to read a book and present a poster	20%
Final paper Due May 27	The final paper should include a critical review of literature in a literacy related issue you decided to study; your own reflection about the importance of such issue; the description of the pedagogical activities carried out with your students and a report of the outcomes of the pedagogical activities carried out with students in your classroom	40%
